About Me

I am a 21 year old student from Portland, OR. and currently living in Eugene, OR. I was attending University of Oregon and Lane Community College to finish my undergrad, with a major in computer information science and computer science. I switched from finishing my undergrad to enrolling into University of Oregon's coding bootcamp to focus on learning full stack web development. My goal after finishing this course is to use the skills I learned to become a front end web developer. I love all things technical and was hoping to use a bit of creativity along with technicality in my future career. For now, I work at a bookstore as a bookseller and am also a barista at a cafe. I have a passion for music to anything from creating, theory, history, and listening. I am currently working to become a private piano teacher for young children in hopes to teach them the history of classical composers and jazz musicians, and to of course improve their piano playing skills.
